WELCOME

We are glad you chose Island Beach State Park for your island getaway! This guide will give you a sneak peek at some of the secrets of IBSP. Whether you're here to fish, enjoy a family hike or simply unwind, IBSP has more to offer than you know.

IBSP staff and volunteers have been hard at work this winter to make sure the park is ready for you to enjoy. Some changes you may see include a rehab at the gatehouse, trailhead improvements at the A6/7 air-hose station as well as A21, additional water bottle filling stations, and updated exhibits at the Nature and Interpretive Centers including a new enclosure for Ellie the terrapin.

While there is plenty to do and see at IBSP, it is also a place for conservation and research. As you will see later in this guide, while we had record numbers of visitors in 2019, we also had high populations of threatened plant and bird species. We pride ourselves on finding that balance between visitor use and conservation. While you may see nicely manicured parking and trail areas, everything beyond is left to the wild!

Please help us in our mission of conservation and recreation, by not disturbing wildlife (their survival depends on it), staying on the marked trail and leaving no trace behind you. Garbage dumpsters are located throughout the park for your convenience.

Thank you to park staff, volunteers and of course our everyday visitors, who all contributed to IBSP being voted the best park in Ocean County by the Asbury Park Press for 2019, the 2nd year in a row! And a special thank you to the Friends of Island Beach State Park for their support and contributions to the park and for providing this guide to enhance your park experience. We hope you enjoy all nature has have to offer!

WATCH LIVE!

Two Cameras Live Stream Island Beach State Park to the World

Join the thousands of people who tune in for a virtual look at Island Beach State Park. The beach camera, mounted at Swimming Area 1, shows viewers current beach conditions. It is used daily by surfers, fisherman, and beach goers. The Pete McLain Osprey Camera provides a live stream of the osprey nest located near the Interpretive Center. Viewers love to watch Bandit and Bay, our resident osprey, go through their life cycle each year. The osprey return to their nest in March from their wintering grounds in South America and the Caribbean. Osprey mate for life and return to the same nest year after year. Viewers watch the osprey fix up their nest, lay their eggs, and raise their nestlings who eventually fly off in the fall. The cameras require regular maintenance and can be quite costly. Please consider making a tax deductible donation to the Friends of IBSP to help keep the camera running.

Birds and Fishing Line

Fishing line for birds can be deadly. Always dispose of line properly—put monofilament in recycling containers, braided line in trash. It is best to cut all line into short segments, less than six inches long. Thank you for picking up line and hooks left by others.

Rescuing a Bird Caught in Line

Shorebirds and anglers are pursuing different fish, but can be found fishing in common areas. If a bird is hooked or tangled in line, DO NO CUT THE LINE. Slowly reel in the bird. Cover the whole bird with a towel, hold the wings folded to the body. Gently hold the head with fingers loosely circling around the neck just underneath the skull. If the bird is weak, injured, or cannot be safely controlled, contact the Park Office (732-793-0506) or find a wildlife rehabilitator from the NJ Fish and Wildlife website. If the bird seems healthy, look to see if there is a hook.

- Push the hook through to cut off the barb, then back the hook out.
- Remove all line, checking under feathers and around legs. If line is imbedded in skin, it will need medical treatment.
- If the bird appears unharmed (feathers and body), release it. If unsure contact the Park Office.

Sedge Islands Marine Conservation Zone

A Guide to a Unique Tidal Marsh Ecosystem

Island Beach State Park
Ocean County, NJ

Sedge Islands Marine Conservation Zone

The 1,900 acre Sedge Islands Marine Conservation Zone (SIMCZ) is located at the southern end of Island Beach State Park. Floating buoys and signs along the boundary notify the public that they are entering the SIMCZ. This is one of New Jersey's most productive wildlife habitats because it contains a combination of maritime forest, thicket, and an extensive tidal marsh. The NJ Department of Environmental Protection manages the area to protect it while making it accessible to the public for a variety of recreational uses.

Permitted

- Boating
- Recreational clamming
- Recreational crabbing
- Fishing*
- Birding
- Hunting**
- Kayaking and Stand Up Paddleboarding
- * NJ Division of Fish and Wildlife regulations apply
- † Except on mainland

Prohibited

- Use of Wave Runners or Personal Water Crafts
- Violating NO wake areas
- Approaching Osprey or Peregrine Falcon nest platforms
- Entering designated bird nesting areas
- Use of alcohol or illegal drugs

For emergencies call
911 or 877-WARNDEP

Sedge Islands Marine Conservation Zone Map can be picked up at the Front Gate, Main Office, Nature Center or by logging on to www.savebarnegatbay.org

(2-3 hours; 3 miles)

Most visitors to Island Beach State Park are unaware that the 1,900 acre Sedge Islands Marine Conservation Zone (SIMCZ) is located along the southwestern end of the park. This pristine natural area has a variety of shallow, narrow channels carving the saltmarsh into a series of islands that make the area perfect for exploring by kayak. Osprey, Peregrine Falcons and a variety of wading birds make this area an incredible place to view wildlife. While activities such as fishing, crabbing and clamming are permitted, personal watercraft are prohibited in the area.

The SIMCZ is best accessed from launch areas at parking lots A15 and A21. The kayak launch at A21 is an unloading/loading zone only. No vehicles are permitted to park in this area. Paddlers should be aware that strong winds, swift tidal currents and exposed sand bars at low tide can make paddling in some parts of the SIMCZ challenging. Maps showing kayak trails are available at the park office, nature center or by logging on to savebarnegatbay.org. Don't forget to apply sunscreen before you launch and drink plenty of water while you are paddling.

Conservation Efforts at IBSP

Along with providing one of the best beaches in NJ, IBSP staff works tirelessly throughout the year to preserve and protect wildlife, threatened and endangered species, and their habitats. To do so, IBSP partners with State, local and nonprofit organizations that provide tools, resources, research and technical assistance to the park. Our current areas of focus include: Red Fox, Piping Plover, and Seabeach Amaranth.

Seabeach Amaranth

2018 – 307 plants      2019 – 1,591 plants

IBSP and the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection's (NJDEP) Land Management Office, Pinelands Preservation Alliance and Raritan Valley Community College work together to manage conservation efforts for the threatened plant Seabeach Amaranth. This species grows along the upper beach along with other federally and state endangered species. Intense human activity in this area degrades the habitat and results in the death of many plants. Management strategies are in place to enhance this habitat while supporting recreational use of our beaches. Strategies include installing post and rope fencing, which you will see along most of IBSP's 10-mile shoreline. Look for the "Protecting our Shoreline" brochure or visit ProtectNJDunes.com for more information.

Piping Plover

2018 – 4 pairs, 4 chicks fledged

2019 – 4 pairs, 6 chicks fledged

IBSP partners with the NJDEP Endangered & Non-game species Program to manage beach nesting birds within the park. Piping plovers are a federally threatened beach nesting bird that also use the upper beach habitat to nest and rear young. Hatchlings are very small, cannot fly and must begin to forage on their own within the first 24 hours of life.

Consequently, Federal law mandates that an area around a piping plover nest be closed to vehicle traffic, giving the hatchlings a better chance of survival. I fully believe that the seabeach amaranth conservation efforts had positive impact on piping plover nesting at IBSP.

Red Fox

Population: unknown

In 2016, IBSP had a stable population of red fox. Red fox are opportunistic omnivores, which means they will eat virtually anything they can find. At first glance they resemble a domesticated dog in terms of size and stature but differ greatly in their nutritional needs. Sadly, recent IBSP visitors were feeding the fox. Feeding wild animals encourages them to approach and rely on humans for food. This decreases their ability to hunt and forage on their own and weakens their ability to fight off disease and predators. Over time, the unnatural diet, compromised immune system, and reduced fear of humans caused our stable population to significantly decline.

Starting in 2019, as part of a statewide research project, Rutgers University selected IBSP to study the presence and distribution of beach carnivores. The study confirmed that IBSP still has a fox population, however, since no official population survey has been conducted, the total of fox at IBSP is still unknown. We do know that park Staff and visitors have observed healthy, curious foxes, which appear to still have their natural fear of humans. If you are lucky enough to see them, please observe from a distance and do not feed the fox!

FRIENDS OF ISLAND BEACH STATE PARK

“WE ARE NOT GUESTS OF THE ISLE, WE ARE FRIENDS OF THE ISLE, AND AS SUCH WE ARE THE KEEPERS OF THE ISLE.”

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

The Friends of Island Beach State Park have been serving as a volunteer organization to enhance interpretive, educational, recreational and research programs at the park for over 20 years. So much was accomplished in 2019:

- 60,000 beach grass culms planted
- The May Day and Beach Plum Festivals had record turnouts
- We sponsored the Lifeguard Tournament
- Partnered with POAC to offer a day of fun and surf to the autism community
- Park trails were restored and new split rail fence was added
- Donated equipment and assisted in maintaining the Park's Nature and Interpretive Centers
- Over 5000 volunteer hours in the books!

This year is shaping up to be even more active with events and projects! Come on out and join us for fun in the park.

The Seals of Island Beach State Park

The waters surrounding Island Beach State Park (IBSP) are frequented by many species of marine mammals throughout the year. From the pods of bottlenose dolphins that can be spotted from the comfort of the beach during the warmer months, to the large whales that can be viewed feeding just offshore, the park provides much-needed pristine habitat for the marine mammals that inhabit the New Jersey Coastline.

The most abundant and perhaps most iconic marine mammals to call IBSP home are the seals. From the fall through late spring, the Park becomes an important haul-out location for the several species of seals that inhabit New Jersey. Harbor seals are the most commonly seen species in the park, oftentimes hauling out in large groups on sand bars. Grey seals and harp seals also frequent IBSP, and hooded seals are occasional visitors to New Jersey waters.

Island Beach State Park provides some of the best viewing opportunities of seals in their natural environment in the state of New Jersey. While it is exciting to see a seal in the wild, it is important that visitors remember to be responsible viewers by giving them plenty of space. Seals are protected under the Marine Mammal Protection Act, making it against the law to approach, touch, feed or otherwise harass them. If your presence causes the seal to change its behavior, that would be considered harassment. If you are lucky enough to spot a seal, please stay at least 150 feet away and keep your dog leashed. Although seals may look cute, they have very sharp teeth and can deliver a painful bite.

Although they are semi-aquatic animals, it is normal behavior for seals to spend time on land. Seals expend a lot of energy foraging for food and avoiding predation, so it is critical for them to be able to haul out on land and rest undisturbed. By using tools such as binoculars, spotting scopes and a telephoto lens, visitors can enjoy viewing opportunities at a distance without disturbing these beautiful animals.

If you are concerned about a seal you think may be sick or injured, or spot any stranded marine mammal or sea turtle, please contact the Marine Mammal Stranding Center directly at (609) 266-0538. The MMSC is the only Federally Authorized Facility in the State of New Jersey that handles strandings of marine mammals and sea turtles.

The Marine Mammal Stranding Center (MMSC) is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization formed in 1978 for the purpose of rescue, rehabilitation and release of sick and injured marine mammals and sea turtles, and has responded to over 5400 animals in distress in its 42 year history.

For more information please visit www.mmsc.org.

*Michele Pagel
Education Coordinator, Marine Mammal Stranding Center*

Seals are federally protected by the Marine Mammal Protection Act. Under this law it is illegal to harass, harm, or disturb a seal's natural behaviors. Seals bite so getting too close can be dangerous as well. If you see a seal, follow NOAA Fisheries Greater Atlantic Seal Viewing Guidelines to keep yourself and the seal safe.

Stay at least 150 feet away.

Leave seal pups alone- their mothers may return soon and human interference can cause them to be abandoned.

Seals bite. Never attempt to touch them and keep pets on leashes when seals are near.

Keep the area quiet and limit disturbance.

Do not pour water on or attempt to cover seals.

Never feed seals- this is illegal and can make the animals sick or dependent on people.

Do not push seals back into the water, follow seals into the water, or attempt to swim with seals.

Kayakers and paddleboarders- keep your distance from animals resting on shore. Your quiet vessels may scare the seals and make them return to the water.

Call for help if seal appears injured or sick.
